News Release

DELAWARE 2010 ELECTION RESULTS EXPLAINED DEMOCRATS MASSIVE VOTER REGISTRATION DRIVE SWAMPS REPUBLICAN PARTY FAILURES

WILMINGTON, DELAWARE (November 22, 2010) -- Recently released voter registration statistics have now largely answered a lively debate within Delaware's Republican party about the reasons for Republican losses on November 2, 2010.

Exit polling (noted below) proves Mike Castle would likely have lost the 2010 election if chosen as the GOP nominee for U.S. Meanwhile, Republican candidates for all offices in Delaware faced a fundamentally more hostile electorate in 2010 than ever existed in past years (<http://www.youtube.com/watch?v=EgSHsWBtKTg>).

Democrats added 29,650 voters -- a staggering 11% increase -- from 2008 to 2010 in a highly-aggressive voter registration drive by the Democrat Party of Delaware.

2010 election results for all Delaware offices may be largely explained by the failures of the Delaware and national Republican Party to engage in party-building and voter registration, compared to an aggressive and effective party-building operation by Democrats.

Known as "the First State" for ratifying the US Constitution first, Delaware is nevertheless a lightly-populated, mostly agricultural oasis. Only 305,716 votes were cast for US Senate in Delaware. Therefore, the 29,650 increase in Democrat voter registration represents almost 10% of all votes cast for US Senate. It may be assumed that newly-registered voters are likely to vote.

Total registered Democrat voters in 2008 were only 264,167 voters for the entire State of Delaware. Democrats managed to increase total Democrat registered voters by 29,650 -- an astonishing 11% increase -- to 293,817 Democrat voters registered for the 2010 elections.

Increases in Democrat voter registrations did NOT come (on net) from Republicans switching parties. The Democrat Party aggressively registered new, first-time voters.

During the same period from 2008 to 2010, Republican registered voters increased by 4,153, and

"Others" increased by 10,516. Therefore, the Democrats 29,650 voter increase does not represent (on net) Republicans switching to Democrats, but represents entirely new voters who had not previously voted in Delaware elections.

By comparison, Democrats showed a similar successful drive in prior years. Democrats increased registration from 2007 to 2008 by 14,451, while Republican increased registration from 2007 to 2008 by only 1,389, and "Others" increased by 1,286 voters.

Meanwhile, weaknesses in the Republican Party's core operations at the national level were just exposed by a controversial resignation letter by the Political Director of the Republican National Committee. Gentry Collins described a disastrously inadequate effort of party-building and fund-raising at the Republican National Committee. <http://www.politico.com/news/stories/1110/45193.html> & http://www.politico.com/static/PPM170\_101116\_gentrycollins.html

Voter registration totals from 2008: http://elections.delaware.gov/services/candidate/more\_regtotals.shtml

Published data runs from July 1, 2008 to October 21, 2010, and does not distinguish between the last months of Obama's presidential election campaign from the subsequent two years from 2008 to 2010. However, the 2010 GOP nominee would still face a more Democrat electorate than at any time in decades.

	Christine O'Donnell (R)	Chris Coons (D)	Some Other Candidate	Not Sure
July 12, 2010	41%	39%	7%	12%

Even the NRSC resorted to Thug Politics before the primary, as Neil King, Jr. of the Wall Street Journal reported (<http://blogs.wsj.com/washwire/2010/09/03/delawares-odonnell-stop-thug-politics/> - "The National Republican Senatorial Committee is also piling on, briefing reporters on negative aspects of O'Donnell's record.").

According to CNN on election night November 2, 2010: "despite pre-election polls that showed longtime Republican Rep. Mike Castle handily beating Coons in a hypothetical match-up, the voters who turned out today said they would still have sent Coons to Washington over Castle, backing him 44-43 percent."

"Exit Polls: the surprise in Delaware," by CNN's Rebecca Sinderbrand, November 2, 2010.

<http://politicalticker.blogs.cnn.com/2010/11/02/exit-polls-the-surprise-in-delaware/#more-132853>

O'Donnell would have won the election over Democrat Chris Coons had the votes been cast on July 12, 2010. Before GOP insiders launched the most vicious attacks, O'Donnell was leading over Democrat Chris Coons by 41% to 39% in a Rasmussen opinion survey.

Exit polls reveal: only 81% of Republicans voting supported the GOP nominee. Thus, Republican refusal to unite behind the party's choice was a major factor in the election (<http://www.delawarepolitics.net/the-delaware-gop-gone-out-permanently/>). Exit polls reveal that O'Donnell and Coons split the Independent-Other vote within the margin of error. This is clearly critical, as Rasmussen showed O'Donnell had a significant advantage with Independents.

National Republicans sought to make the election a referendum on President Obama. In other states, disapproval of Pres. Obama led to Republican victories. However, in Delaware, exit polls show that 57% of Delaware voters still support Obama and exactly the same 57% voted for Democrat candidate

Chris Coons for U.S. Senate. This indicates that Democrats were motivated to turn out to support Democrat Barack Obama. Actual election results demonstrate that O'Donnell actually improved Republican voter turn-out, but had no noticeable effect on Democrat voter turn-out.

Even the New York Times Frank Rich on the Left & CNN-Redstate's Erick Erickson on the Right agree that O'Donnell's candidacy took the brunt of the media's focus away from other races, and allowed the GOP to pick-up seats where other candidates may have withered under more glaring focus.

On the Battle Between Midgets vs. Tigers

Posted by Redstate-CNN's Erick Erickson \(Profile\) - Tuesday, October 12th at 5:00AM EDT

"When the book is written on Election 2010, the media will mock the O'Donnell candidacy, but whether she wins or loses she will be a hero in my book."

In the battle between midgets versus tigers, the midgets can win. But a few of the midgets must sacrifice themselves to distract the tigers.

First of all, yes, yes I know it should be midgets versus lions, but that is an internet hoax, this is very real, and I'm an LSU fan.

This is precisely what is happening in the battle between the tea party and the establishment. The establishment controls the major party machines, the media, the fundraising tools, etc. The tea party is not in a fight against the Democrats or Republicans, but the establishment, which has grown out of touch with the people and is destroying the country. Democrat and Republican alike, the leadership of each is terrible and given voice by a media that is largely incapable of relating to the concerns of a group labeled fringe yet driving the election.

The tea partiers are the midgets. The establishment politicians and media are the tigers.

In Delaware, Christine O'Donnell is the midget sacrificing herself to the tiger of the mainstream media and establishment.

The odds are stacked against Christine O'Donnell. Thanks to the industriousness of the National Republican Senatorial Committee, the Senate GOP Leadership, the Delaware GOP Leadership, and the assorted pundits, journalists, and other talking heads on TV and in print, Christine O'Donnell is really taking one for the team and will likely not make it past the tigers.

But because of Christine O'Donnell's willing sacrifice, the tigers are distracted. With only about twenty-two days left, the tigers are just now trying to refocus on Sharron Angle, Ken Buck, Mike Lee, Joe Miller, Marco Rubio, Rand Paul, Pat Toomey, and Ron Johnson. Meanwhile, for the past five weeks or so, these candidates have built up leads or drawn even with their opponents.

While the tigers have been taking out Christine O'Donnell, these candidates have surrounded the tigers and are preparing to slay the beasts.

Shame on all those who do that. When the book is written on Election 2010, the media will mock the O'Donnell candidacy, but whether she wins or loses she will be a hero in my book. But for her, neither Sharron Angle nor Ken Buck nor Mike Lee nor Joe Miller nor Marco Rubio nor Rand Paul nor Pat Toomey nor Ron Johnson would have had as strong a chance of winning in this last month before the general election.

Christine O'Donnell, willingly or not, has stood firm in the face of the media and establishment onslaught and distracted them all. And only now, with twenty-two days left, are the media and establishment turning, in terror, to realize how close the midgets are to slaying the tigers.

Do not insult or belittle Christine O'Donnell here at RedState. Because of her, even if she cannot win, she has distracted the tigers long enough so that others can win. She is owed our thanks.

By FRANK RICH, October 2, 2010: "...O'Donnell is particularly needed now because most of the other Republican Tea Party standard-bearers lack genuine antigovernment or proletarian cred. O'Donnell, like Palin, knows that attacks by those elites, including conservative grandees, only backfire and enhance her image as a feisty defender of the aggrieved and resentful Joe Plumbers in 'real America.'

The more O'Donnell is vilified, the bigger the star she becomes, and the more she can reinforce the Tea Party's preferred narrative as "a spontaneous and quite anarchic movement" (in the recent words of the pundit Charles Krauthammer) populated only by everyday folk upset by big government and the deficit...
